6. [ ] In discussing the question of the amendments to the Foreign Relations Authorization bill, Tom Korologos, of the White House, repeated his earlier request that we "not do anything" without checking with him. He complained that certain agencies were trying to get special exemptions for themselves, whereas the Administration policy was to attack the entire body of amendments across-the-board rather than piecemeal. I emphasized to him our concern about the restrictions [ ] He said they understood this and I said we were planning to provide some background material for possible use by Stennis.

7. [ ] Called Miss Lynn Braydrick, in the office of Representative Charles B. Rangel (D., N.Y.), in response to her query as to the status of our reply to the Congressman's letter to the Director of 6 June. I said a letter was en route to the Congressman which he should receive tomorrow morning and which would answer his questions about the basis for our failure to provide him with the reports he requested. I added that we were reviewing the classification of all these reports and were optimistic that at least some of them could be declassified and made available to the Congressman within the next two or three days.

[ ] Bill Ashworth, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, called to say that the Committee would like to schedule Mr. Helms to appear in Executive Session on SALT verification at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, 20 June. He said that in the Executive Session they would hope he could cover sensitive matters and provide exhibits, after which they hoped he would discuss less sensitive aspects of the verification problem in open session.

He said the Committee had scheduled Secretary Rogers and ACDA Director, Smith, for Monday the 19th, Mr. Helms and Dr. Foster on Tuesday the 20th, and Secretary Laird and the Joint Chiefs on the 21st. I told Ashworth I would check with the Director and be in touch with him.

We agreed that Harry Byrd or Dominick might be worth approaching. Korologos said Abshire had tried to get hold of Griffin and I should coordinate with Abshire. If we struck out, Korologos suggested I call him tomorrow afternoon since he has his hands full at the moment.

Korologos said we probably should see Mailliard on the conference on the "Hoover Commission" type bill.
